Rethinking History, Science, and Religion
 Bernard Lightman, 2019-10-03. The historical interface between science and religion was depicted as an unbridgeable conflict in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Starting in the 1970s, such a conception was too simplistic and not at all accurate when considering the totality of that relationship. This volume evaluates the utility of the complexity principle in past, present and future scholarship. First put forward by historian John Brooke over twenty-five years ago, the complexity principle rejects the idea of a single thesis of conflict or harmony or integration or separation between science and religion. Rethinking History, Science, and Religion brings together an interdisciplinary group of scholars at the forefront of their fields to consider whether new approaches to the study of science and culture, such as recent developments in research on science and the history of publishing, the global history of science, the geographical examination of space and place, and science and media, have cast doubt on the complexity thesis or if it remains a serviceable historiographical model.

Theological Incorrectness: Why Religious People Believe What They Shouldn't
 D. Jason Slone, Assistant Professor of Religious Studies, University of Findlay, 2004-01-30. Ask two religious people one question and you'll get three answers: Why do religious people believe what they shouldn't? Not what others think they shouldn't believe, but things that don't accord with their own avowed religious beliefs. This engaging book explores this puzzling feature of human behavior. D. Jason Slone terms this phenomenon theological incorrectness. He demonstrates that it exists because the mind is built in such a way that it's natural for us to think divergent thoughts simultaneously. Human minds are great at coming up with innovative ideas that help them make sense of the world, he says, but those ideas do not always jibe with official religious beliefs. From this fact, we derive the important lesson that what we learn from our environment, religious ideas, for example, does not necessarily cause us to behave in ways consistent with that knowledge. Slone presents the latest discoveries from the cognitive science of religion and shows how they help us to understand exactly why it is that religious people do and think things that they shouldn't. He then applies these insights to three case studies. First, he looks at why Theravada Buddhists profess that Buddha was just a man but actually worship him as a god. Then he explores why the early Puritan Calvinists, who believed in predestination, acted instead as if humans had free will by, for example, conducting witch hunts and seeking converts. Finally, he explains why both Christians and Buddhists believe in luck, even though the doctrines of Divine Providence and karma suggest there's no such thing. In seeking answers to profound questions about why people behave the way they do, this fascinating book sheds new light on the workings of the human mind and on the complex relationship between cognition and culture.

of Mind, Under the Operations and Directions of Reason Thomas J. Vaiden, 1852 Nineteenth-Century Nation Building and the Latin American Intellectual Tradition Janet Burke, Ted Humphrey, 2007-02-28 This volume provides readings from the works of eighteen Latin American thinkers of the nineteenth century who were engaged in articulating and examining the problems that Spanish and Portuguese America faced in the one hundred years after securing independence. The selections represent all major regions of Latin America. Although these regions differ significantly with regard to indigenous background, geography, climate, and available resources, their people confronted the common problems that surround the intractable challenges of statecraft and nation building: issues of race, international relations, economics, education, and self-understanding. Burke and Humphrey provide fresh, accessible translations of key works, a majority of which appear for the first time in English; a General Introduction that sets the works in historical and intellectual context; detailed headnotes for each selection; a Guide to Themes and bibliographic references.

The Rowman & Littlefield Handbook of Philosophy and Religion Mark A. Lamport, 2022-04-07 The Handbook of Philosophy and Religion is a one-volume examination of the most salient concepts that sit at the intersection of religion and philosophy. This book grounds readers in the mysteries that have evoked wonder and consternation for millennia, such as the nature of divinity in relation to humanity, the legitimacy of religious experience, and how we frame language to speak about it; the possibility of miraculous occurrences and theories regarding life after death.

The Essential Unity of All Religions Bhagavan Das, 1932-01-01 An examination of the similar truths in the religions of the world. Topics include: Scientific Religion, Divine Will, the Nature of God, Evolution, Prayer, and the Sacraments.

Philosophy of Geometry Zekâi Şen, 2024-12-17 This book enriches the mind of the reader regarding the topics covered, provided that the given guidelines are followed systematically, by conveying a deep understanding of each topic concerning the elegance of geometry as the fundamental cornerstone for visualization. Rational deductive inferences are used to express doubt about assumed knowledge, providing a path to linguistically innovative solutions which can be then transformed into mathematical equations if necessary. The whole text is based on geometric visualization, deduced linguistically, so that anyone interested in the numerical results of aesthetic design can broaden their scope of understanding. Each chapter in the book is a source of dynamic information for the interested reader. The chapters are not intended to be read in sequential order because each is written quite independently from the others. Only closely related chapters are tied with each other.

Do you think that the feminist movement is helping to end sexism? Do you think that today's Christians live genuine lives? Do you think that private media is better than state media? Do you think that keeping violent prisoners alive is the right thing to do? If you answered yes to any of these questions, then you're in for a rude awakening. Can we end racism? Can we end sexism?
