Private Rights in Public Resources Professor Leigh Raymond, 2014-06-03 Privatizing public resources by creating stronger property rights including so called rights to pollute is an increasingly popular environmental policy option While advocates of this type of market based environmental policy tend to focus on its efficiency and ecological implications such policies also raise important considerations of equity and distributive justice Private Rights in Public Resources confronts these ethical implications directly balancing political theory and philosophy with detailed analysis of the politics surrounding three important policy instruments the Kyoto Protocol the 1990 Clean Air Act Amendments and the 1934 Taylor Grazing Act Author Leigh Raymond reviews legislative records and administrative documents and interviews key policymakers Confirming that much of the debate in the selected policies centers on the equity or fairness of the initial allocation of property rights he applies the theories of John Locke Morris Cohen and others to build a framework for identifying the competing norms of equity in play Raymond s study reveals that despite the different historical and ecological settings the political actors struggled to reconcile similar arguments and were often able to achieve a similar synthesis of conflicting ownership ideas Rather than offering a familiar argument for or against these policies on ethical grounds the book explains how ideas about equity help determine a policy s political fate Shedding light on the complex equity principles used to shape and evaluate these controversial initiatives this empirical analysis will be of interest to those on all sides of the debate over market based policies as well as those interested in the role of normative principles in politics more generally

The Politics of Knowledge Richard K. Laird, 2019-05-03 Whether or not the U S is in decline can be debated but there is evidence that its political system is becoming less able to solve major problems This is in part because loyalty to a belief or an ideology may be taking priority over learning how to understand the problems This work attempts to revitalize the importance of learnability by reviewing some fundamentals of who we are how the system works and why learning is difficult Humans driven by opinions and perceptions tend to discount politics similar to the way they might discount science yet it was the study of science and politics that brought much of mankind to remarkably higher standards of living Government and the economic system it implemented was initially designed for the purpose of channeling self interests into public benefits Understanding what an inclusive political culture is or why there is a Constitution for example could be useful toward restoring the credibility of our central political organization the core of society's stability and development We are losing respect for our government's decision making ability but in a democracy citizens must be held more accountable for who their government is The hypothesis is that if more humans are more learnable we will increase the possibilities for finding the best solutions to big problems

Jane Davidson, 2005 Click Additional Materials for downloadable samples I welcome this student friendly text to complement my favorite checklists This text develops the core checklist framework to provide evaluation methodology basics for presumably mainly introductory courses on program evaluation Colin Sharp Evaluation Journal of Australasia What is evaluation specific logic and methodology This book answers that question in a way that is persuasive accessible and understandable It presents a set of principles and procedures to guide the task of blending descriptive data with relevant values to draw explicitly evaluative conclusions The book makes a significant contribution to positioning evaluation as a unique and special field of inquiry and judgment Michael Quinn Patton Union Institute and University Amidst the wash of methods books available to evaluators Davidson's book provides powerful techniques for asking and answering the important foundational questions in any program evaluation Doug Leigh Pepperdine University This is a very well written book that offers a unique perspective on long practiced evaluation techniques and presents several new potentially very useful techniques that return valuation to the evaluation process Greg Roberts University of Texas Austin Evaluation theorists for years have advised evaluators to take into account all relevant values as part of an evaluation But especially for the relatively new evaluator even one who is knowledgeable and experienced in research methodology there is not a lot of guidance about how this is done Evaluation Methodology Basics The Nuts and Bolts of Sound Evaluation provides a step by step guide for doing a real evaluation It focuses on the main kinds of big picture questions that evaluators usually need to answer and how the nature of such questions is linked to evaluation methodology choices Jane Davidson explains how to combine a mix of qualitative and quantitative data with relevant values such as needs to draw explicitly evaluative conclusions Many students and evaluators find it difficult to visualize what evaluation logic and methodology look like in practice To address this Davidson presents readers with useful rubrics and flowcharts that may be used during each stage of the evaluation Many of the concepts presented in the chapters are illustrated with specific examples from a range of disciplines Exercises and pop quiz questions help reinforce the key points covered in each chapter provide homework assignments for those teaching an evaluation course and allow learners to develop slices of an evaluation plan as they work their way through the text Evaluation Methodology Basics is an ideal text for students of evaluation and students in programs that have evaluation course requirements such as education health sociology psychology and many others throughout the social sciences It will also be essential reading for practitioners who find themselves thrown into evaluation roles without the benefit of specialized evaluation training
