

Metropole

A black and white illustration with a woman in a red coat as the central figure. She is seen from behind, standing in a large, arched doorway of a dark, multi-story building. The building has many windows, some of which are looking out onto a bright, cloudy sky. The woman is looking out the doorway at a fantastical cityscape. The city is built on a steep, rocky hillside. The buildings are tall and narrow, with many windows and balconies. The architecture is a mix of classical and modern styles. The sky is bright and cloudy. The overall mood is one of mystery and adventure.

Metropole Ferenc Karinthy:

Metropole Ferenc Karinthy, 2012-05-28 On his way to a linguists conference in Helsinki Budai finds himself in a strange city where he can't understand a word anyone says One claustrophobic day blurs into another as he desperately struggles to survive in this vastly overpopulated metropolis where there are as many languages as there are people Fearing that his wife will have given him up for dead he finds comfort in an unconventional relationship with the elevator operator in the hotel A suspenseful and haunting Hungarian classic and a vision of hell unlike any other imagined With time Metropole will find its due place in the twentieth century library on the same shelf as The Trial and 1984 G O Chateaufort In the same way that Kafka becomes relevant again every time you renew your driver's license Karinthy captures that enduring horrifying and exhilarating state of being at the mercy of an unfamiliar land NPR

The Red Children Maggie Gee, 2022-04-07 It's the 2030s in Ramsgate and four people who don't look quite human are found sitting naked in the early spring sunlight on the quay of the quiet south coast resort The locals are puzzled the newcomers are larger and heavier than they are and say they are fleeing the heat Soon more arrive Their tall red haired leader The Professor talks to the universe The locals talk among themselves Red people appear everywhere making friends going into the caves liked by some but accused of bringing infection by others Two rivalrous brothers Liam and Joe take different sides as one joins a notorious far right group Their teacher Monica is the first to warn there'll be trouble And she's right there is but there is also a great Midsummer Festival laughter and love Set in a world in crisis this original gripping fable about migration and global warming restores belief in the power of human kindness A stylish intriguing novel A fable bursting with freshness and foresight a charming sparkling jewel of a novel to be cherished and held high as an antidote to modern day bleakness and climate despair Leila Aboulela The Red Children offers a warning and a vision of our past present and future This timely vital and generous book is extraordinary in its courage and hopeful and brutally honest in its clarity An essential book for our times Salena Godden

Vauxhall Gabriel Gbadamosi, 2013-05-06 1970s London Young Michael runs past the railway arches and terraces of Vauxhall Reaching the street on which he lives he witnesses a young girl fall from a window her sari floating down behind her Her lifeless body lies crumpled on the ground This incident marks the beginning of a period in which Michael's life threatens to unravel From his sister's taunts to a series of house fires police harassment his parents crumbling marriage and the realisation that the council intends to clear out the slum he calls home he learns to navigate his way through an array of obstacles big and small An extraordinary debut novel Vauxhall tells a warm and hopeful story of a young boy and the city that surrounds him A tenderly observed fascinating portrait of a childhood in South London as it moves from post war darkness into an uncertain new era Blake Morrison author of South of the River Only a poet could have written Vauxhall clean swift and with flashes of lightning Bonnie Greer Immediately appealing this is quite an odyssey through the maelstrom that London was in the 1970s A remarkable achievement Brian

Worlds Apart? A Postcolonial Reading of post-1945 East-Central European Culture Cristina Sandru, 2013-01-16 This study explores the relation of the Eastern European problematic to postcolonial critical practice interrogating the extent to which postcolonialism can help illuminate instances of imperial domination in non Third World contexts It argues that colonisation is to be understood principally as a condition of ideological domination that has engendered similar forms of literary and cultural resistance consequently it offers a comparative framework which enables a reading in differential contexts of texts that ostensibly have little in common but which on close examination reveal a shared imaginative space rhetoric and narrative agency The book consists of two interrelated parts Part one is a critical discussion of the ideologies cultural imaginaries and representational practices articulated in a diverse range of representative postcolonial and post 1945 East Central European texts these are shown to share despite dissimilar conditions of production uncannily related narrative modes and thematic emphases Part two is a comparative literature case study which discusses two authors whose work is both highly representative of the cultural formations discussed in the first part Milan Kundera and Salman Rushdie and at the same time highly controversial The chapters dedicated to Kundera's and Rushdie's work examine the cultural geography of their novels particularly in the writers use of memory and story telling to reconfigure history and personal identity in conditions of literal and metaphorical displacement While their novels thrive on ironic subversion and ambiguity they simultaneously gesture towards a redemptive space of the imagination transcending the constraints of both locality and history
