The Fight Against Hunger and Malnutrition David E. Sahn,2015-05-21 Advances in science and policy during the past 50 years have prevented the predicted widespread food shortages as the world s population soared Malnutrition however remains prevalent This book details strategies and practical approaches designed to alleviate hunger and malnutrition in a new era where technological change markets patterns of governance and social programs have an increasingly global dimension More specifically this book addresses a range of considerations including the role of small farmers in a world where the global reach of multinational corporations have enormous control from the farm to local markets and the grocery store misgivings and misperceptions about genetically modified foods the increasing competition of food and energy sectors for agricultural output the importance of micronutrient deficiencies and chronic disease related to obesity which often coexists in the same communities as hunger and issues of sustainability of the food and agricultural system in an period when there is increasing concerns over global warming and environmental degradation Currently there is also more emphasis on evidence based policymaking which has raised the standard of proof for evaluating the impact of micro level interventions that have traditionally been so widely embraced and are now under increased scrutiny. It is in this context that this book provides practical advice on programs that can effectively target those at greatest risk of malnutrition and guidance on policies to promote a healthy and sustainable food and agricultural system. Overlaying all of these challenges is the book's emphasis on both identifying data and information needs for decision making and practical considerations for better understanding the domestic and international political and social constraints that need to be addressed when trying to translate scientific knowledge and information into practice.

Consumer Perceptions and Food Diana Bogueva, 2024-10-23

This book is a timely overview of the various aspects of consumer perception related to food. This book explores consumer perceptions that are vital to marketers and often underlie the success or failure of products in the marketplace. Perception is the process of selecting, organizing, and interpreting sensations into a meaningful whole, and this book highlights how human perceptions are unique, highly subjective, and easily distorted. These perceptions are influenced by our senses: sight, hearing, taste, smell, and touch, as well as our beliefs, emotions, opinions, and experiences. This book states that this is related to food, and perceptions are also guided by beliefs, thoughts, emotions, feelings, and opinions about or preferences, expectations, and knowledge of, and the sensory experience, the fear, and the relationships built between the consumers and the food over time. This book aims to further the understanding of the fundamental mechanisms which determine individual responses to existing and emerging food issues. This book provides insights into consumer behaviour, e.g., consumer decision making, promoting behaviour change, factors influencing consumers' food and meal choices, confidence in the safety of food, perception of health-related messages, and food laws and regulations, sustainable and responsible consumer behaviour, e.g., food waste, acceptability of new food alternatives, innovations, and technologies integrating consumer insight and communication challenges in cross-functional communications in innovation processes. Consumer Perceptions and Food delves into how these perceptions shape consumer behavior from decision making and behavior change to meal choices and confidence in food safety. It explores the impact of health-related messages, food laws and regulations, and examines the acceptability of new food alternatives and technologies. The book also addresses the importance of sustainable and responsible consumer behavior, including food waste and ethical consumption. Through a rich array of insights, this book provides a deep understanding of the fundamental mechanisms that drive individual responses to food issues. It emphasizes the importance of mindful eating, making conscious food choices that benefit our health, the environment, and the planet. This involves considering the origins of our food, its production methods, and the broader impacts of our choices on public health and ecosystems. This book is a call to action for consumers to rethink their relationship with food, fostering deeper connections and appreciation for sustainable practices and ethical consumption. It is a crucial step in the ongoing journey of shaping the future of food, guided by informed and mindful consumers.

The political economy of large-scale food fortification in West Africa: Pathways toward harmonization Resnick, Danielle, 2025-05-21

For two decades

there have been ongoing efforts at harmonizing large scale food fortification LSFF policies and procedures in West Africa Despite some notable successes micronutrient deficiencies in the region remain elevated To identify which bottlenecks exist towards greater harmonization on LSFF this study adopted a political economy perspective to consider areas of contention over interests ideas and institutions between domestic stakeholders across countries and within regional bodies The study finds that West African governments have made impressive strides with harmonizing their LSFF standards and committing to the importance of fortification as one of several instruments for improving micronutrient deficiencies Likewise the donor and technical community have worked closely with the West African Economic and Monetary Union UEMOA the Economic Community of West African States ECOWAS as well as specialized institutions of ECOWAS such as the West African Health Organization WAHO to advance the LSFF agenda support the private sector and national fortification alliances and identify new food vehicles for fortification At the same time incoherent trade tax and macroeconomic policies in a context of multiple shocks and crises protectionist impulses aimed at building up domestic agro industries lack of financial commitment to LSFF structures in the absence of donor support and uneven financial contributions to ECOWAS and WAHO remain barriers to progress Learning from these lessons and considering how to address LSFF from a holistic perspective that accounts for West Africa s unique demographic economic and political characteristics will not only benefit extant harmonization efforts in ECOWAS but also help with broader continental alignment on fortification under the African Union s 2025 2036 food and nutrition security strategy
