

Worship Formation & Liturgical Resources: Frequently Asked Questions

What is the meaning and use of liturgical colors?

The variety and richness of colors provided suggest an ecology of worship that is rooted in history. These resources should not be considered the final solution to the question of color, just as the prayer book is not the final solution to the question of prayer. These resources are provided for your consideration and prayerful reflection. The worship leader may be responsible for communicating any or many of the uses outlined in these resource pages.

In the Christian tradition colors are used for vestments and paraments (see also, "What are vestments and paraments and why are they used?"), but a simplified system of colors developed only gradually and subsequently used through the Middle Ages. Today, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America provides a system of colors for use by its congregations; for the most part, the same system is also used by Roman and Anglican churches, at least in the United States; and by many churches around the world, including the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Canada.

Many of the colors associated with the seasons are closely linked with the experience of Christmas in the Northern Hemisphere. Christmas in the Southern Hemisphere with experience the church year differently in that context, perhaps calling forth different color associations. It is also helpful to realize that colors have different associations across the globe, just as they have had different associations even the course of the church's history. For example, white is the color North Americans and European Christians typically associate with Christmas and Easter, the color white signifying the purity of Christ, light or joy. In many Eastern cultures, however, white connotes mourning. Red, associated with energy, blood or the power of things in Western culture, is the color associated with purity in India.

The color's name is where the worship leader will be called attention to the season of the season or festival being celebrated. A brief summary of their usage, according to the church year, follows.

Advent Blue is associated with Advent, suggesting hope. This association originated in Scandinavia, probably because purple dye was too expensive for churches to use. Some associations use purple in Advent, a color associated with royalty as the church awaits the newborn King (note: this is a different meaning than when it is used for Mary and Mary's.

Christmas White, calling to mind the purity of the newborn Christ, and its use light and joy in Him. Some also use Gold.
