Writing Tip 5

There are five ways to begin an essay. One way is to use sound or motion words to set the stage for your writing.

Dear Parents,

Scrivible, scrivible, scrivible! Know, know, know! This is the sound of your child's writing. Children who write change their minds, even, and even again, as they write. There are five ways to begin an essay. One of these is to use sound or motion words to set the stage for your writing.

Your Child's Teacher

We did this in class!

What is your favorite game? Write the introduction to an essay about your favorite.

Parents, please help!

Read your child's work and the words on the lines. The words on the lines are suggestions for words to use. Help your child write a paragraph that would be a good example of the words on the lines. Use the words on the lines to help your child write a paragraph that would be a good example of the words on the lines.

Directions:

Authors often choose to begin their writing with sound and motion words so that they can set the mood for their writing.

Fun Fact! What sound did you hear when you read, "Scrivible, Scrivible, Scrivible"? Did you think you were in the land of the "Scrivible"? Or did you think the writer was trying to be funny? Try to set a mood with your choice of sound or motion words.

1 What sound would you choose for a part? Why would you choose that sound?

2 Write a story about a time you made something.

This assignment is due at school on _____
