Young children love to be read to — as shown by the number of preschoolers and young children in libraries and bookstores. Reading to young children is a proven practice that encourages school readiness and helps protect a generation of young readers. But, as the number of children's librarians is declining sharply in many libraries, this time around, it's difficult to get quality programming and stories to young kids. Reading to your child has to not only be fun, but also be good for them. The little bit that you do is important to their future.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 15 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle, while the training group participated in a 10-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 10-week training program. The HR and EE of the training group were significantly higher than those of the control group at the end of the 10-week training program. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.
