Production, 1800-1932 David Hounshell, 1984 David A Hounshell's widely acclaimed history explores the American genius for mass production and traces its origins in the nineteenth century American system of manufacture Previous writers on the American system have argued that the technical problems of mass production had been solved by armsmakers before the Civil War Drawing upon the extensive business and manufacturing records of leading American firms Hounshell demonstrates that the diffusion of arms production technology was neither as fast nor as smooth as had been assumed Exploring the manufacture of sewing machines and furniture bicycles and reapers he shows that both the expression mass production and the technology that lay behind it were developments of the twentieth century attributable in large part to the Ford Motor Company Hounshell examines the importance of individuals in the diffusion and development of production technology and the central place of marketing strategy in the success of selected American manufacturers Whereas Ford was the seedbed of the assembly line revolution it was General Motors that initiated a new era with its introduction of the annual model change. With the new marketing strategy the technology of the changeover became of paramount importance. Hounshell chronicles how painfully Ford learned this lesson and recounts how the successful mass production of automobiles led to the establishment of an ethos of mass production to an era in which proponents of Fordism argued that mass production would solve all of America's social problems.

Service-Ability Kevin Robson, 2012-11-12 Times have changed. Long gone are our days of being kings of the manufacturing industry; we are now immersed in the world of service where the relationship between an organization and the customer is an integral part of the product offering. The nation is suffering from a widespread lack of truly customer satisfying service. We lack the very thing that we need to make this new paradigm work efficiently: service ability. Organizations of all kinds are facing high customer churn, serious customer antagonism, loss of consumer confidence, and plummeting customer satisfaction. Research shows that totally satisfying the customer is the only thing that will secure loyalty and offer significant competitive advantage. Yet still on a daily basis we encounter service that frustrates us. Whilst the emergence of technology has no doubt brought efficiency to many areas of business activity including the third sector, it has led to the standardised and indifferent service we regularly receive. We appear to have lost sight that people do business with people. Through efficient technology our organisations may be serviceable but they are not serviceable. The arrival of Generation Y and the developments in social media provide businesses with a whole new way to engage with their customers but also provide a new way for customers to rate companies' products and services, not always in a positive manner. Like or Fail have become part of our social language. Organizations that refocus on the need to treat customers in a way that satisfies them and not the technology will have better customer retention, lower costs of replacement, and will build their brand value through better reputations. Service Ability delves deeply into these areas to show how today's managers need to re-think the way we structure, manage, lead, and organize our companies to achieve total customer-centric work cultures that develop lasting relationships with customers.
