Transition and Transformation Bo Florin, 2012-12-24 Victor Sjöström 1879-1960 or Victor Seastrom as he was known during his Hollywood career was undoubtedly one of the most renowned silent film directors Focusing on his masterpieces such as The Scarlet Letter and The Wind but also including films he had made in Sweden before moving to Hollywood as well as film fragments and films considered lost Florin analyses Sjöström's austere and naturalistic style and the transformations it underwent during his Hollywood years

Visions of Vienna Alexandra Seibel, 2017-08-02 Visions of Vienna explores the cinematic city of Vienna in international filmmaking in order to provide a fresh perspective on the works of canonized auteurs such as Erich von Stroheim G. W. Pabst Ernst Lubitsch and Max Ophüls By elaborating the intimate connection between their Vienna set films and an urban experience bound up with the cultural specificity of the city the book adds a new contribution to the study of Viennese modernity in cinema It argues that Vienna's common association on film with anti-modern imagery of the nostalgic glorification of the Habsburg Myth is directly tied to crucial issues of modernity Films set in Vienna persistently articulate the experience of displacement due to emigration changing gender relations and anti feminism class distinction and anti Semitism These themes are all tangibly evident in the representations of this city in cinema despite the ongoing mystification of Vienna as the incarnation of waltz dreams and schmaltz

Film Societies in Germany and Austria

1910-1933 Michael Cowan,2023-03-07 This study traces the evolution of early film societies in Germany and Austria from the emergence of mass movie theaters in the 1910s to the turbulent years of the late Weimar Republic Examining a diverse array of groups it approaches film societies as formations designed to assimilate and influence a new medium a project emerging from the world of amateur science before taking new directions into industry art and politics Through an interdisciplinary approach in dialogue with social history print history and media archaeology it also transforms our theoretical understanding of what a film society was and how it operated Far from representing a mere collection of pre formed cinephiles film societies were according to the book s central argument productive social formations which taught people how to nurture their passion for the movies how to engage with cinema and how to interact with each other Ultimately the study argues that examining film societies can help to reveal the diffuse agency by which generative ideas of cinema take shape

Cinema and Social Change in Germany and Austria

Gabriele Mueller,James M. Skidmore,2012-09-01 During the last decade contemporary German and Austrian cinema has grappled with new social and economic realities The cinema of consensus a term coined to describe the popular and commercially oriented filmmaking of the 1990s has given way to a more heterogeneous and critical cinema culture Making the greatest artistic impact since the 1970s contemporary cinema is responding to questions of globalization and the effects of societal and economic change on the individual This book explores this trend by investigating different thematic and aesthetic strategies and alternative methods of film production and distribution Functioning both as a product and as an agent of globalizing processes this new cinema mediates and influences important political and social debates The contributors illuminate these processes through their analyses of cinema s intervention in discourses on such concepts as national cinema the effects of globalization on social mobility and the emergence of a global culture The essays illustrate the variety and inventiveness of contemporary

Austrian and German filmmaking and highlight the complicated interdependencies between global developments and local specificities They confirm a broader trend toward a more complex critical and formally diverse cinematic scene This book offers insights into the strategies employed by German and Austrian filmmakers to position themselves between the commercial pressures of the film industry and the desire to mediate or even attempt to affect social change It will be of interest to scholars in film studies cultural studies and European studies Weimar Cinema and After Thomas

Elsaesser, 2013-04-15 German cinema of the 1920s is still regarded as one of the golden ages of world cinema Films such as The Cabinet of Dr Caligari Dr Mabuse the Gambler Nosferatu Metropolis Pandora's Box and The Blue Angel have long been canonised as classics but they are also among the key films defining an image of Germany as a nation uneasy with itself The work of directors like Fritz Lang F W Murnau and G W Pabst which having apparently announced the horrors of fascism while testifying to the traumas of a defeated nation still casts a long shadow over cinema in Germany leaving film history and political history permanently intertwined Weimar Cinema and After offers a fresh perspective on this most national of national cinemas re evaluating the arguments which view genres and movements such as films of the fantastic Nazi Cinema film noir and New German Cinema as typically German contributions to twentieth century visual culture Thomas Elsaesser questions conventional readings which link these genres to romanticism and expressionism and offers new approaches to analysing the function of national cinema in an advanced culture industry and in a Germany constantly reinventing itself both geographically and politically Elsaesser argues that German cinema's significance lies less in its ability to promote democracy or predict fascism than in its contribution to the creation of a community sharing a historical imaginary rather than a national identity In this respect he argues German cinema anticipated some of the problems facing contemporary nations in reconstituting their identities by means of media images memory and invented traditions Herr Lubitsch Goes
