Abstract

The actions and feelings questionnaire (AFQ) provides a short, self-report measure of how well someone uses and understands visual communicative signals such as gestures. The objective of this study was to translate and cross-culturally adapt the AFQ into Dutch (AFQ-NL) and validate this new version in neurotypical and autistic populations. Translation and adaptation of the AFQ consisted of forward translation, synthesis, back translation, and expert review. In order to validate the AFQ-NL, we assessed convergent and divergent validity. We additionally assessed internal consistency using Cronbach's alpha. Validation and reliability outcomes were all satisfactory. The AFQ-NL is a valid adaptation that can be used for both autistic and neurotypical populations in the Netherlands.

Introduction

The hallmark of autism spectrum conditions (ASC), also known as autism spectrum disorders (ASD), is difficulties with social interaction, although atypicalities related to the motor system are also common (Bhat et al., 2011; Rinehart et al., 2002). This can be seen in movement production, where simple movements (Cook et al., 2013), interactive movements directed at tablet computers (Chua et al., 2019), and gestures (redacted., in prep) show different kinematic patterns compared to neurotypical individuals. Perception of human movement may also differ in ASC, as there is some evidence that autistic individuals have difficulty recognizing subtle differences in action kinematics (Di Cesare et al., 2017; Rochat et al., 2013), and are less likely to use one person's action to predict the action of a conspecific (Chambon et al., 2017; von der Lühe et al., 2016).

Atypicalities in the production and perception of movement are highly relevant for understanding ASC, as movement is itself an important aspect of human social interaction. Through visual signaling, we are able to express internal states (e.g., mood), signal intentions, and form more complex, multimodal utterances (Holler & Levinson, 2019). During social interaction, we must therefore also be able to interpret the visual signals produced by our interlocutor. The production and comprehension of action (i.e., purposeful human movement) are thought to be functionally connected, a theory known as “motor cognition” (Jackson & Decety, 2004).

Motor cognition is focused largely on the idea that similar components of the motor system are involved in the production of goal-directed actions as well the perception or interpretation of the actions of others. This overlap, or link, between production and perception likely utilizes the fact

Thyroid Eye Disease Rebecca S. Bahn, 2012-12-06 Patients afflicted with thyroid eye disease or Graves ophthalmopathy GO may experience not only pain and visual loss but also disfigurement Full understanding of pathogenesis has been elusive and treatment modalities are imperfect As with other conditions more effective intervention will follow only after a better understanding of pathogenesis is reached The goal of this volume is to give an overview by leaders in the field of the present state of the art both in pathogenesis and clinical aspects of GO Much attention has been directed towards determining which cells within the orbit are targets of the autoimmune process and how these and other cells might participate in the local inflammatory process It is now generally agreed that orbital fibroblasts preadipocyte fibroblasts and adipocytes are the targeted and activated cells in GO and that full length TSH receptor TSHr is expressed in these cells Further there is growing consensus that this receptor is up regulated in the orbit in GO residing primarily in newly differentiated adipocytes However it is also evident given a sufficiently sensitive assay that TSHr is detectable in fibroblasts and adipocytes from the normal orbit and other anatomic sites as well It will be important to determine whether the observed increase in orbital TSHr expression itself initiates the orbital autoimmune process Also to be decided is whether orbital lymphocytes from GO patients specifically recognize this receptor and what factor or factors unique to Graves disease might stimulate TSHr expression in orbital cells
