Illustration 1. Vitruvian Man within a square by Cesariano, taken from Vitruvius, De Architectura, Como, 1521.

The comments made by Vitruvius on the subject of proportions have proved to be highly influential within the history of architectural theory. They have provided the grounding for much subsequent theoretical work on the relationship between buildings and the human body. The tradition of relating the layout of temples and churches to the form of the body is captured explicitly in the drawings of Francesco di Giorgio, where the ghost-like figure of a human body is quite literally mapped onto the plans and elevations of buildings. It is these drawings, along with those of Fra Giocondo, Cesariano, Leonardo da Vinci and others, that Rudolf Wittkower addresses in his discussion of proportions in his seminal work on the centralised church of the early Italian Renaissance (Wittkower, 1962). In particular, I am grateful for the help and advice of Yvonne Derratt, who has already made the argument for a link between narcissism, mimesis and the death instinct (see M. Phil. thesis, University of Cambridge). I am also grateful to Matt Connell, with whom the initial ideas for this paper were first discussed.

Intersections Iain Borden, Jane Rendell, 2000 Intersections represents a newly emergent approach to the history of architecture that addresses both the relevance of critical theories to an historical understanding of architecture and the development of those theories

German Façade Design Randall Ott, 2016-09-17 German architecture prior to the modern period has received less systemic analytical study than that of Italy France and Britain Scholarly discussion of broad traditions or continuities within Germanic or Central European facade design is even sparser Baroque era studies of the region mostly devote themselves to isolated architects monuments or movements Modernism's advent decisively changed this Germanic architecture enjoyed sudden ascendancy Yet even so study specifically of that region's facades still lagged nothing compares to the dozens of treatments of Le Corbusier's facade systems for example and how these juxtapose with French neoclassical or Italian Renaissance methods Given the paucity of multi period studies one can be forgiven for believing Germany's effervescence of radical modern works seems unprecedented This book takes up these multiple quandaries It identifies and documents a previously unrecognized compositional tradition characterized here as the screen facade and posits it as a counter narrative critiquing the essentialist authentic canon currently dominant in Western architectural history By crossing evenly over the dividing line between the historical and modern periods it offers valuable insights on indigenous roots underlying some aspects of Germany's invigorating early twentieth century architectural developments The book chronologically examines 400 years of closely related facades concentrated in Germany but also found in Austria the Czech Republic German speaking Switzerland and nearby areas of Central Europe While nearly 75 buildings are mentioned and illustrated a dozen are given extensive analysis and the book focuses on the works of three architects Schinkel Behrens and Mies Relationships between examples of these three architects facades far transcend mere homage amongst masters Glimmers of the system they eventually codify are apparent as early as at Heidelberg Castle in 1559 and Nürnberg's Rathaus in 1622 The book argues that in Germany northern Gothic affinities for bisection intense repetition and rote aggregation intersected with southern Classical affinities for symmetry hierarchy and centrality thereby spawning a unique hybrid product the screen Instead of graphic formality this study is guided by on site perceptions propositional contrasts means of approach interpretive conflicts and emotion and it relates the design of these facades to concepts proposed by contemporary philosophers including Novalis Hegel Nietzsche Freud Adorno and most importantly Gadamer on hermeneutics

Architecture and the Mimetic Self Lucy Huskinson,2018-02-02 Buildings shape our identity and sense of self in profound ways that are not always evident to architects and town planners or even to those who think they are intimately familiar with the buildings they inhabit Architecture and the Mimetic Self provides a useful theoretical guide to our unconscious behaviour in relation to buildings and explains both how and why we are drawn to specific elements and features of architectural design It reveals how even the most uninspiring of buildings can be modified to meet our unconscious expectations and requirements of them and by the same token it explores the repercussions for our wellbeing when buildings fail to do so Criteria for effective architectural design have for a long time been grounded in utilitarian and aesthetic principles of function efficiency cost and visual impact Although these are important considerations they often fail to meet the fundamental needs of those who inhabit and use buildings Misconceptions are rife not least because our responses to architecture are often difficult to measure and are in large part unconscious By bridging psychoanalytic thought and architectural theory Architecture and the Mimetic Self frees the former from its preoccupations with interpersonal human relations to address the vital relationships that we establish with our nonhuman environments In addition to providing a guide to the unconscious behaviours that are most relevant for evaluating architectural design this book explains how our relationships with the built environment inform a more expansive and useful psychoanalytic theory of human relationship and identity It will appeal to psychoanalysts and analytical psychologists architects and all who are interested in the overlaps of psychology architecture and the built environment Walter Benjamin and Architecture Gevork Hartoonian,2009-10-27

The essays compiled in this book explore aspects of Walter Benjamin s discourse that have contributed to the formation of contemporary architectural theories Issues such as technology and history have been considered central to the very modernity of architecture but Benjamin s reflection on these subjects has elevated the discussion to a critical level The contributors in this book consider Walter Benjamin s ideas in the context of digitalization of architecture where it is the very technique itself that determines the processes of design and the final form This book was published as a special issue of Architectural Theory Review Space-Body-Ritual Reena Tiwari,2010-05-12 Set against the contemporary thinking of the city as a spectacle Space Body Ritual Performativity in the City establishes everyday life in the city as a ground for authentic experience Reena Tiwari emphasizes the city as a space of lived experience an intricately layered space giving people a poetic experience responding to their memories and desires She also explores the conflict between two ideas the idea of the city as text to be read and understood from a distance and the city as body where the body after writing the text through its performance achieves the capacity to read and understand it Space Body Ritual demonstrates that the abstract seeing embedded in the city as a text is underwritten by the idea of power operating at deeper levels in the city This hidden power is the power of the user's body in space Furthermore Tiwari proposes that an understanding of the city as body through lived experience through rhythm analysis where rhythms of everyday and extra everyday practices are understood leads to the design of an environment that is evocative and is able to generate a bodily response from the user To understand the rhythms it becomes essential to know the way users inhabit understand and map or present the city spaces by their bodies Space Body Ritual will compel its readership to think of the parameters of spatial design as cultural generator
