

Conditional perfect tense is used when it is unknown if the subject performed an action in the past, but it's possible, necessary, or likely. The past modal perfect tense begins with any past tense modal (could, should, would, might) followed by "have," plus a past tense action verb (regular verbs ending with "-ed" and many irregular verbs ending with "-en"). For example,

The train would have landed on the dock...

The train is much ~~should~~ have never fallen on the floor...

Write the correct form of the action verb in parentheses in the blank.

Could have (allow) _____

Should have (go) _____

Might have (be) _____

Would have (want) _____

Could have (accept) _____

Should have (skip) _____

Present modal perfect tense is used when it is unknown if the subject performed an action prior to some designated point in the future. OR past, but it's possible, necessary or likely that the subject will or did. A present modal perfect tense begins with any present tense modal (will, may, shall, must) followed by "have," plus the past tense of the action verb (regular verbs ending with "-ed" and many irregular verbs ending with "-en"). For example,

Illness may have been her realizing illness.

May have (forget) _____

Should have (conserve) _____

We all have (share) _____

May have (write) _____

Should have (abandon) _____

Past modal progressive tense is used when it is unknown if the subject is in the process of performing an action, but it's possible, necessary or likely. The past modal progressive tense begins with any past tense modal (could, should, would, might) followed by "be," plus the "ing" form of the action verb. For example,

The light might be realizing the positive meaning.
