

Human Blood Cell Typing

(Why do blood types exist?)

What?

Antigens (sometimes termed "markers" or even "flags") are found on the surface of many living cells. These antigens act as either potentially harmful substances or as the body's own "self" proteins. Foreign and self cell receptors for pathogens (foreign and self) cells have a system for being recognized as either self (belong to the body) or foreign (not self) cells that do not belong to the body.

Model 1 – Red Blood Cells and Antibodies

	Person with Blood Type A	Person with Blood Type B	Person with Blood Type AB	Person with Blood Type O
Cell with surface antigen
Antibody produced
Cells in the presence of anti-B antibody
Cells in the presence of anti-A antibody

1. Blood types in the human population are determined by the presence or absence of antigens on the surface of the red blood cells.
  - a. According to Model 1, how many blood types are found in the human population?
  - b. What shape is used in Model 1 to represent an A antigen?
  - c. What shape is used in Model 1 to represent an B antigen?
2. What do you predict a type B red blood cell from a type B red blood cell?
