Abstract

The public sector is always designed both in the developed and developing countries of world for service delivery to the generality of the public. Most developing countries of the world have continued to search for effective measures through which goods and services could be rendered to the citizenry. To achieve this goal, a number of reforms have been initiated and implemented. Unfortunately, the much desired goal has not been attained in many developing countries, Nigeria inclusive. The paper attempts to draw attention to the factors militating against the smooth implementation of reform efforts in the public sector in Nigeria. The study adopted the historical descriptive method hence data for the study was sourced through the secondary means. The study revealed that there are two broad factors which reforms in Nigeria must address in order to make the public sector effective in service delivery: these include human/ factor and the institutional factor. In addition, the study found out that reform initiative can aid in the capacity building process suggesting that these two concepts: reform and capacity building must be addressed in unison. It was recommended that the legislative arm of government which performs oversight function of governance should insist on the comprehensive application of reform recommendations.

New Public Management in Africa Benon C. Basheka, Lukamba-Muhiya. Tshombe, 2017-08-25 The administrative sciences have been dominated by a turn to managerial perspectives in the late 20th and early 21st centuries and in the spirit of this turn New Public Management or NPM promises to produce efficient responsible and client oriented public services The reforms carried out in the pursuit of New Public Management are often accompanied by great optimism and rapid enthusiastic steps toward implementation Even in highly developed industrial countries however these fundamental reforms often overlook the political and cultural contexts of the implementing country New Public Management in Africa Emerging Issues and Lessons provides much needed theoretical foundations for NPM reforms in the African context and reflects on the success of existing reforms in the development of several African states The individual contributions in this timely volume provide important analyses of academic discourse practical policy achievements and desiderata The book as a whole however provides a valuable impetus for public administration research in and on African states sharing findings on the results of reforms to date and adjustments required for these reforms to succeed For public administration researchers outside of Africa this book offers a review of New Public Management case studies that are unavailable or difficult to find elsewhere contributing much to the exchange between African and Western administration science research and demonstrating that African administrative research is well prepared to help resolve global challenges

The Struggles of Post-Independence Nigeria Ucheoma Nwagbara, 2022-02-01 In The Struggles of Post

Independence Nigeria Ucheoma Nwagbara argues that despite Nigeria's oil wealth and arable agricultural land Nigerians are not any better today than they were before independence Nwagbara examines Nigeria's struggles with corruption reckless government spending poverty inequality crime and violent insurgency to show how successive Nigerian leadership has failed to utilize the country's enormous natural and human resources to improve citizens' lives eradicate poverty and deliver broadly shared prosperity especially to the middle class and the poor Through his analysis Nwagbara demonstrates that the nationalist ideals of dedicated and accountable leadership behind the struggle for independence in Nigeria have been betrayed as the emergent post colonial leadership cared only for personal survival and gain Despite these failures Nwagbara reveals that Nigeria may still have a chance to improve and recover if Nigerians unite and demand real change through political and social activism
