Theory-Based Data Analysis for the Social Sciences Carol S. Aneshensel, 2013 This book presents the elaboration model for the multivariate analysis of observational quantitative data This model entails the systematic introduction of third variables to the analysis of a focal relationship between one independent and one dependent variable to ascertain whether an inference of causality is justified Two complementary strategies are used an exclusionary strategy that rules out alternative explanations such as spuriousness and redundancy with competing theories and an inclusive strategy that connects the focal relationship to a network of other relationships including the hypothesized causal mechanisms linking the focal independent variable to the focal dependent variable The primary emphasis is on the translation of theory into a logical analytic strategy and the interpretation of results The elaboration model is applied with case studies drawn from newly published research that serve as prototypes for aligning theory and the data analytic plan used to test it these studies are drawn from a wide range of substantive topics in the social sciences such as emotion management in the workplace subjective age identification during the transition to adulthood and the relationship between religious and paranormal beliefs The second application of the elaboration model is in the form of original data analysis presented in two Analysis Journals that are integrated throughout the text and implement the full elaboration model Using real data not contrived examples the text provides a step by step guide through the process of integrating theory with data analysis in order to arrive at meaningful answers to research questions

Language and Social Structure in Urban France David Hornsby, 2017-07-05 The coming together of linguistics and sociology in the 1960 s most notably via the work of William Labov marked a revolution in the study of language and provided a paradigm for the understanding of variation and change Labovian quantitative methods have been employed successfully in North America the UK Scandinavia and New Zealand but have had surprisingly little resonance in France a country which poses many challenges to orthodox sociolinguistic thinking Why for example does a nation with unexceptional scores on income distribution and social mobility show an exceptionally high degree of linguistic levelling that is the elimination of marked regional or local speech forms And why does French appear to abound in hyperstyle variables which show greater variation on the stylistic than on the social dimension in defiance of a well established theory than such variables should not occur This volume brings together leading variationist sociolinguists and sociologists from both sides of the Channel to ask what makes France exceptional In addressing this question variationists have been forced to reassess the accepted interdisciplinary consensus and to ask as sociolinguistics has come of age whether concepts and definitions have been transposed in a way which meaningfully preserves their original sense and crucially takes account of recent developments in sociology Sociologists for their part have focused on the largely neglected area of language variation and its implications for social theory Their findings therefore transcend the case study of a particularly enigmatic country to raise important theoretical questions for both disciplines
