Rhetoric and the Arts of Design David S. Kaufer, Brian S. Butler, 2013-11-26 The design arts from the design of buildings and machines to software and interfaces are associated with types of knowledge and performance thought to be structured modular and systematic Such arts have become increasingly prestigious in our technocratic society Since Aristotle the art of rhetoric was conceived as a loosely structured practical art thought to be limited in the extent to which it could mimic more precise subject matters The art of rhetoric has been controversial since classical times but its status has sunk even lower since the industrial revolution a point when civic cultures began to cede authority and control to the cultures of specialized experts Many sympathizers of rhetoric have resisted its decline by calling for a civic art of public discourse to stand in opposition to a technocratic specialized discourse that has come increasingly to disenfranchise the ordinary citizen This is the first book to question the rhetoric technical knowledge split from a more fundamental perspective To get some perspective on what is at stake in rhetoric's traditional classification as a practical art the authors explore the distinction between practical and design arts enumerate the various criteria cited in the literature for qualifying a cluster of knowledge and performative skills to count as an art of design show how the knowledge and performative skills associated with the art of rhetoric meet the major requirements of design knowledge propose a general architecture of rhetorical design one descriptive both of civic address and specialized academic argument turn to the Lincoln Douglas debates to embody and provide some empirical support and illustration for their architecture demonstrate how Lincoln and Douglas can be thought of as expert designers whose rhetoric is highly structured and modular and explain how the rhetoric of both rhetorical agents can be represented in the layers and modules that one needs to display plans for buildings software or other design artifacts These layers and modules are not just post hoc annotations of the debates they also illuminate new and systematic ways for viewing the debates and by implication other specimens of rhetoric in terms of strategies of artistic production Kaufer and Butler conclude their presentation by citing some of the research and educational implications that follow from housing rhetoric within the family of design arts

One America? Nathan Angelo,2019-05-01 Reveals how presidents deploy a rhetoric that attempts to attract many racial and ethnic groups but ultimately directs itself to an archetypal white Middle American swing voter Despite major advancements in civil rights in the United States since the 1960s racial inequality continues to persist in American society While it may appear that presidents do not address the topic of race it lurks in the background of presidential political speech across a range of issues including welfare crime and American identity Using a thorough approach that places textual analysis in a historical context One America asks what presidents say about race how often they say it and to whom they say it Nathan Angelo demonstrates how presidents attempt to use rhetoric to compose a message that will resonate with the many groups that comprise the modern party system but ultimately those alliances cause presidents to direct most of their speeches about race to an archetypal white Middle American swing voter thereby restricting the issues and solutions that they discuss While the American demographic profile is changing rhetoric that links American identity with racially coded concepts and appeals to white voters racial resentments has become ubiquitous Angelo warns us about the possible repercussions of such tactics noting that while they may allow presidents to craft winning coalitions their use continues to legitimate a system that ignores racial inequality
