Sound waves, are initially collected by a large membrane in the ear that called the eardrum or _____. These waves then are transformed by three small bones, the _____, called _____ in the ear. The ear is made up of three sections: the _____, middle ear, and inner ear. The middle ear contains three small bones called the ossicles, which are the hammer, anvil, and stirrup. The stirrup is connected to the oval window of the cochlea. The cochlea is a spiral-shaped structure that contains the auditory nerve. The auditory nerve carries the signals from the cochlea to the brain. The brain then interprets these signals as sound. The ear is also responsible for maintaining the balance of the body. The vestibular system, which includes the semicircular canals, is responsible for this function. The semicircular canals are filled with a fluid called endolymph. The movement of this fluid creates signals that are sent to the brain, which then interprets them as balance.
