CURIOUS ABOUT CAREERS: TEACHER

Do you enjoy working with kids? Do you like helping people? Is learning fun for you? Teaching could be the career for you!

Teachers need to graduate from college and get their teaching license in whichever state they would like to teach in. This requires taking some tests and working with another teacher for a few months to make sure they understand the best ways to work with students.

Teachers need to be able to work well with other people. They need to work with students, parents, other teachers, and other staff members at the school. Sometimes the students may get frustrated if they don't understand the work, so teachers need to know how to help them calm down and work through it. Other times the students might have something unpleasant going on at home, so teachers need to be able to listen and provide a safe place for those students. Teachers may plan lessons with other teachers in the same subject area or grade level, so they have to be able to work well with their colleagues. There are many other staff members in schools who teachers also need to work with, including principals, coaches, secretaries, and custodians.

As most kids know, teachers also have to do a lot of grading. They grade math tests, spelling tests, and many other papers. But did you know that a lot of teachers also have to create their own lessons, worksheets, projects, and tests? Most teachers are told what information they have to teach, but they may get to choose how to teach it. Teachers may use technology, art, books, and experiments to teach their topics, among other ways! They take a lot of time to create lessons that will help their students learn.

Rethinking Widening Participation in Higher Education Alison Fuller,Sue Heath,Brenda Johnston,2011-04-26 Extending the chance for people from diverse backgrounds to participate in Higher Education HE is a priority in the UK and many countries internationally Previous work on widening participation in HE however has focussed on why people choose to go to university but this vital new research has focussed on looking at why people choose not to go Moreover much of the extant literature concentrates on the participation decisions of teenagers and young adults whereas this book foregrounds adult decision making across the life course The book is also distinctive because it focuses on interview data generated from across the membership of inter generational networks rather than on individuals in isolation in order to explore how decision making about educational participation is a socially embedded rather than an individualised process It draws on a recent UK based empirical study to argue that this network approach to exploring educational decision making is very productive and helps create a comprehensive understanding of the historically dependent personal and collective aspects of participation decisions This book examines therefore the ways in which non decision making about HE is embedded within a range of social networks consisting of family partners and friends and to what extent future participation in HE is conceived as within the bounds of possibility It provides a conceptual framework for understanding the value of network based decision making about participation in HE in the light of the changing historical and policy contexts in which it is always located highlights the importance of researching the socially embedded narratives of ordinary people in order to critique the deficit discourse which dominates debates about widening participation in HE discusses the policy and practice implications of the network based approach for widening participation and educational institutions

Talk about Careers in Science , 2010-01-01 Non scholae sed vitae discimus we learn for life rather than for school In this Roman saying the ultimate reason for school is recognized as being a preparation for life High school science too is a preparation for life the possible careers students identify and for defining possible future Selves In this book the contributors take one dataset as their object of scholarship informed by discursive psychology Bakhtin and poststructural positions to investigate the particulars of the language used in interviews about possible careers conducted both before and after an internship in a university science laboratory Across this collection some contributors focus on data driven analyses in which the authors present more macro perspectives on the use of language in science career talk whereas others see the data using particular lenses that provide intelligible and fruitful perspectives on what and how students and interviewer talk careers in science Other contributors propose to transform the database into different representations that allows researchers to single out and demonstrate particular dimensions of discourse Thus these contributions roughly fall into three categories that are treated under the sections entitled Discourse Analyses of Career Talk Discursive Lenses and Foci and Innovations in Theory Method and Representation of Career Talk Research

Congress. House. Committee on Ways and Means, 1965 Boomers 3.0 Lawrence R. Samuel, 2017-07-14 Capitalizing on what is arguably the most important social phenomenon of our time and place the aging of America this book shows organizations how to market specifically to baby boomers in their third act of life The graying of America is undeniable with an estimated 10 000 boomers turning 65 every day But to dismiss the baby boomer generation as a group no longer worth marketing to would be foolish According to the Census Bureau in 2029 the year when the last boomer will have turned 65 there will still be more than 61 million boomers roughly 17 percent of the projected population of the United States Boomers will still be the wealthiest generation in the United States until at least 2030 according to the Deloitte Center for Financial Services with their share of net household wealth to peak at 50.2 percent by 2020 Boomers 3.0 Marketing to Baby Boomers in Their Third Act of Life describes how to market to baby boomers from a cultural perspective specifically addressing the demographic group of baby boomers in their later adulthood a period that will continue for the next two to three decades The author uses the term 3.0 to indicate the baby boomers third phase of life and explains how this third act of life will differ from earlier periods accordingly organizations should take a different approach to marketing to them than in the past This book offers a way to contextualize business objectives within a culturally based forward thinking framework that fully leverages the opportunities presented by what is perhaps the biggest and most affluent customer base in history Readers will be able to use the strategies described to map territories to stake and mine in targeting boomers create meaningful relationships with individuals in this group and communicate effectively with boomers to offer them products and services How to Lead
