Abstract

How does Islam view substance addiction? What happens to the soul of the person suffering from addictive disorder? What happens to his relationship with God? These are some of the questions that this article tries to answer. Three models on drug addiction from an Islamic theological perspective will be explored here. Two of them are preventative models based on an understanding of society rooted in shame-culture, while the third model, called Millati Islami, practiced in the USA, is founded on the Islamic understanding of tawba (repentance). Furthermore, drugs and addiction in scripture, as well as medieval Muslims society's attitude towards them are explored. As a whole, the models discussed in the article demonstrate that Islamic theology possesses the intellectual and theoretical tools to develop fully-fledged theological models of addiction, and a suggestion to explore one model is made in the conclusion.

1. Introduction

How does Islam view substance addiction? What happens to the soul of the person suffering from addictive disorder? What happens to their relationship with God? These are some of the questions that this article tries to answer. Three tentative models on drug addiction from an Islamic theological perspective will be explored here. Theological reflections on what Islam says about substance use and why people become addicted will provide a good starting point for religious professionals offering pastoral support to Muslims suffering from substance dependence. Identifying the belief system and theological stance of people suffering from addictive disorder may prove to be an advantageous point to begin from in order to understand how to help them [1]. Perspectives On Drug Addiction In Islamic History And Theology:

Treating Addiction from an Islāmic Psychology Perspective G. Hussein Rassool, 2024-11-27 This book provides an understanding of behavioural and substance disorders from an Islāmic psychology perspective Despite the religious prohibitions against the use of most substances addiction is a significant psychosocial and spiritual problem both in Muslim majority countries and among Muslim minorities However many Muslim with substance use disorder have been left to suffer in silence because addictive behaviours are considered taboo Not only do feelings of guilt shame and a fear of being stigmatised and excluded from community prevent many from seeking therapeutic and spiritual interventions there are also limited culturally sensitive service provisions offering help for Muslims with addictive behaviours This book will synthesise the body of knowledge of the psychology of addiction from an Islāmic perspectives to foster awareness and understanding of addictive behaviours to break that stigma It will also provide knowledge required to respond effectively to Muslim clients that psychotherapists and counsellors might encounter in their clinical practice presenting a step by step application of Rassool's Islāmic Psychotherapy Practice model in working with clients with addictive behaviours This book will be a valuable read for Islāmic psychologists psychotherapists and counsellors addiction researchers and specialists and students in these fields

Current Perspectives on Substance Use Disorders in South Asia S. M. Yasir Arafat, Sujita Kumar Kar, 2024-11-25 This book is about public mental health needs and aspects of substance use disorders in South Asian countries South Asia consists of eight countries with low and middle income backgrounds The people of this region with a combined population of around 2 billion share common cultures beliefs and behavioral patterns regarding physical and mental health Among them more than 66 million people use different forms of substances including cannabis opium and opiates amphetamine and prescription drugs Substance abuse brings deadly consequences It affects almost all spheres of life i.e. personal social recreational criminal and family aspects both physical and mental health and economy of the society as well as the country Advanced management and holistic prevention are public health priorities However very little attention has been paid to the issues as a region as well as in countries like Afghanistan Bangladesh and Pakistan Hence the editors of this book aimed to publish a book that discusses the public mental health and healthcare issues related to substance use disorder in a densely populated low and middle income setting
