

Multi-word Verbs

Multi-word verbs are verbs that consist of more than one word. There are three types of multi-word verbs: prepositional verbs, phrasal verbs, and phrasal prepositional verbs.

Many multi-word verbs carry an idiomatic meaning. This means that they should not be taken literally; rather, they have a figurative or metaphorical meaning. Examples:

John over-hauled "America". I was there and did nothing at all to it.

I came by the train "route". He came by the train this morning.

Paul got with me on "technical". I actually do have to get up with this nonsense.

You will have to memorize the idiomatic meanings of most multi-word verbs in order to begin to use them.

Prepositional Verbs

Prepositional verbs consist of a main verb and a preposition. A preposition links a noun or pronoun to other words in a sentence. Prepositions and verbs used to show relationships (often in English, space or time) form the verb and the rest of the sentence. Prepositions themselves in prepositional phrases, which consist of other prepositions (and/or objects).

I was with my roommate on the way to class.

In this example, was is the main verb, and on is the preposition which introduces the prepositional phrase on the way to class. Together, they make up the prepositional verb was on.

Phrasal Verbs

Phrasal verbs consist of a main verb and a particle. A particle is a function word that often has little meaning on its own and depends on the main verb to have meaning.

John was under almost on the way home from Tulsa.

In this example, was is the main verb, and under is the particle. Notice that under cannot be a preposition in this case because there is no following prepositional phrase — there is no object of the preposition.
