

Summary

Summary: "A Christmas Memory"

Originally published in Mademoiselle magazine in December 1958, "A Christmas Memory" remains one of Truman Capote's (1924-1984) most anthologized short stories. A midcentury author with a clear and evocative prose style, Capote is remembered for his novels Breakfast at Tiffany's (1958) and for his groundbreaking work of true-crime nonfiction, In Cold Blood (1966). "A Christmas Memory" returns to the rural Alabama setting of the author's childhood to recount a magical Christmas season shared between the seldom-visited "Buddy" and his cousin, who is in her sixties (and to whom Buddy, the narrator refers only as "my friend"). In recounting this odd couple's dedicated holiday preparations—which include baking 21 fruitcakes to give away to their eccentric collection of friends, baking and decorating an enormous Christmas tree, and exchanging handmade knits—the story reveals the sustaining love shared between two social outsiders. "A Christmas Memory" has attained the status of a holiday classic, with television adaptations appearing in 1967 and 1999.

This guide refers to the 2007 Modern Library version of "A Christmas Memory."

The story opens with a first-person narrator instructing the reader to "[i]magine a morning in late November [...] more than twenty years ago" (3), setting the story in the early 1930s. Though largely narrated in the present tense, the story is a series of the narrator's memories, beginning with the seven-year-old narrator sitting in the kitchen of a large old house in a rural town. At the window stands her "best friend," a woman who is in her sixties but "still a child" (4). This friend, a distant cousin of the narrator's, calls him "Buddy" after a "boy who was formerly her best friend" who died in the 1880s. Other people—relatives—live with them in this house, but "though [these relatives] have power over us, and frequently make us cry, we are not, on the whole, too much aware of them. We are each other's best friend" (4).

Buddy's friend suddenly exclaims, "[i]t's fruitcake weather" (4). This announcement marks the beginning of the Christmas season, as every year the two start their Christmas preparations by baking fruitcakes for their friends. The two head outside to collect the pecans needed for the recipe, accompanied by their beloved dog Queenie. They also bring a run-down baby carriage that belonged to Buddy shortly after he was born. Though it is nearly falling
