the plant kingdom and to a small extent even in animals. A characteristic feature of these glycosides is their ability to release hydrocyanic acid on treatment with dilute acids or appropriate enzymes. The term cyanogenic is used to designate this property regardless of whether pure substances, plants or animals are serving as the source. In the latter cases the term cyanophoric is occasionally employed synonymously. Cyanogenesis in plants was probably first discovered by SCHRADER in 1803 while working with bitter almonds. In 1830 ROBICQUET and BOUTRON CHARLARD also succeeded in isolating the parent glycoside namely amygdalin. Over the years a total of 18 cyanogenic glycosides have been isolated and characterized more or less completely. Table I p. 76. It will be noted that the majority of these compounds has been isolated in the era of classical organic chemistry and that progress in discovering new compounds, not to mention new structural types, has been surprisingly slow. It is worth remembering here that the mechanism of cyanogenesis has been established only in the minority of known cyanogenic species. The cyanogenic glycosides have last been reviewed in 1958 by DILLE MANN. Since then no complete reviews in this field have appeared. It is the purpose of the present article to survey the more recent advances and hopefully to stimulate continued interest in these interesting compounds.
