Writing in English as a Foreign Language Huan Zhao, Lawrence Jun Zhang, 2022-05-30 This book explores teachers' cognitions about the teaching of writing in English as a foreign language (EFL) and their teaching practice as well as factors influencing the formation and reformation process of their cognition Taking stock of Bakhtin's dialogism as the theoretical framework the authors argue that the formation and reformation of teacher cognition is a dialogic process A systematic analysis of participating teachers' cognition formation and reformation process suggests the highly individual nature of teachers' cognitions EFL researchers and teachers teacher educators teacher education policymakers university administrators and EFL textbook writers could draw on the findings of the study to provide better resources to implement the teaching of EFL writing more effectively The study has adopted a mixed methods approach whose quantitative results show the patterns and differences of teacher cognition among teachers of different backgrounds and with different schooling education and working experiences The qualitative findings show in detail teachers' cognition formation and reformation processes and the factors contributing to such processes revealing convergence and divergence of teachers' stated cognitions with a focus on the discrepancy between teacher cognition and teaching practice These are useful lenses through which researchers and teachers will find significant implications for offering EFL writing instruction more effectively

Intelligent Tutoring Systems for Foreign Language Learning Merryanna L. Swartz, Masoud Yazdani, 2012-12-06

Multilingual communication within the world community is important for economic political and cultural interactions In a global environment where other languages are increasing in importance in addition to recognized international standards i.e. English and French language learning is becoming more important for improved international relations At the same time recent advances in instructional technology make the promise of building intelligent tutoring systems in advanced technology laboratories to teach these language skills a reality in the near future These tutoring systems therefore may help us foster improved methods for acquiring languages As active language learners and instructional technology researchers we felt an international meeting with similar individuals was needed to discuss how such advanced tutoring systems are to be designed and implemented We held such a meeting the results of which are presented in this volume The purpose of this Advanced Workshop sponsored by the NATO Scientific Affairs Division was to bring together a multidisciplinary group of researchers who were active in the development of intelligent tutoring systems for foreign language learning Participants came from computer science computational linguistics psychology and foreign language learning Washington D C was selected for the Workshop site since it is Merryanna's home city the capital of the United States and an international multilingual community in its own right Masoud agreed to the location with a promise to be shown the White House and graciously volunteered to coordinate activities from the European side
