

5 layers of comprehensive concussion assessment

come together to create a clear treatment plan

1

Clinical Interview

This includes asking patients about the nature of their injury, their symptoms from the time of injury, and any pertinent family or medical history that could impact recovery.

VOMS (Vestibular/Ocular Motor Screening)

This involves a series of tests that look at the body systems responsible for integrating balance, vision, and movement.

3

Neuropsychological Testing

This determines the level of trouble the person is having with symptoms and measures visual and verbal memory, processing speed, and reaction time.

4

Neuroimaging

Simply put, this is either a CT or MRI scan. This is only to rule out a more serious injury. It is NOT used to see if a concussion has occurred.

5

Symptoms Assessment

This measures four critical areas: how clear the person is thinking, how well the person is feeling physically, his or her emotional state-of-mind, and any sleeping issues.
