Information Systems Elaine Lawrence,Barbara Pernici,John Krogstie,2006-01-20 Mobility is perhaps the most important market and technological trend within information and communication technology With the advent of new mobile infrastructures providing higher bandwidth and constant connection to the network from virtually everywhere the way people use information resources is predicted to be radically transformed Over the last years a new breed of information systems referred to as mCommerce systems or mobile information systems has appeared to address this emerging situation

In 2000 the IFIP 8.1 WG decided to look into establishing a task group to look closer at this area and the idea was adopted and extended by IFIP TC8 the following year. After the arrangement of several workshops, this task group has been the driving force behind the arrangement of MOBIS IFIP TC 8 Working Conference on Mobile Information systems held in Oslo Norway 15-17 September 2004. The objective of the working conference was to provide a forum for researchers and practitioners interested in planning, analysis, design, construction, modification, implementation, utilization, evaluation and management of mobile information systems to meet and exchange research ideas and results. Specifically, we tried to use the working conference to clarify differences and similarities between the development of mobile vs more traditional information systems, investigate organizational impact of mobile information systems, investigate mobile commerce applications combined with the advantages of mobile communications technologies, X Mobile Information Systems, evaluate existing and newly developed approaches for analysis, design, implementation and evolution of mobile information systems.

Key Account Management in Business-to-Business Markets Stefan Wengler, 2007-11-06 Key account management as an alternative organizational form of marketing management became increasingly popular in many companies during the last years In its beginning key account management was particularly applied in the consumer packaged goods industry with respect to wholesalers as well as large department stores for some time key account management has also been applied time by suppliers in industrial markets as well as by companies offering product related services in order to serve their most important customers Despite its practical relevance in marketing management the implementation of key account management as well as its integration within the supplier's organization is hardly realized on an adequate economic evaluation Similarly key account management controlling of an already implemented key account management organization is also lacking These organizational units are once implemented neither controlled nor evaluated concerning their economic performance With respect to these rather surprising findings in marketing management practice the author develops a theory based decision support model which seems capable of overcoming the previously described deficits Based on a comparative analysis the efficiency of alternative key account management organizations is evaluated using criteria developed from transaction costs economics This decision model enables companies to evaluate each organizational key
