Management of the Typhoon project Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts, 2011-04-15 This report examines the past decisions taken on the Typhoon fighter aircraft and looks at improvements that the Department can make to its delivery model to get more from industry in terms of reduced costs and better performance in the future The Department originally planned to buy 232 aircraft However in light of changed operational requirements and significant funding constraints arising from the pressures of the defence budget it is now ordering 160 aircraft and will retire the 53 oldest aircraft by 2019 leaving a long term fleet of 107 aircraft Overall it is costing the Department 20.2 billion 3.5 billion more than it first expected to buy a third fewer aircraft This is equivalent to the purchase cost of each aircraft rising by 75% from 72 million to 126 million Problems with the availability of spares mean that Typhoons are not flying the hours required and the Department is forced to cannibalise parts from other aircraft to maximise the number of aircraft available on a given day As a result it is not fully training all its pilots Support costs are budgeted at 13.1 billion but could be as high as 16.6 billion across the life of the aircraft The Department has identified potential savings of 3.5 billion to keep support costs within budget The Department will need to both reduce the cost and increase the timeliness of future collaborative spares and repairs contracts At present the contracts do little to incentivise better industry performance and to penalise failure

 Office,2011-03-02 Getting full value for money from the significant investment in the Typhoon project will depend on the Ministry of Defence successfully progressing the delivery of multi role capability so that the aircraft can be deployed when required and affordably The 2010 Strategic Defence and Security Review underlined how Typhoon is core to the RAF s combat aircraft capability and emphasised the Government s commitment to develop Typhoon into a fully multi role aircraft which can conduct both air to air and ground attack missions Typhoon already successfully undertakes air defence tasks and so far MOD has committed a total of 564 million to upgrade Typhoon for the ground attack role However it is unlikely to become the aircraft of choice for most ground attack missions until 2018 The cost of the Typhoon project has risen substantially Despite the MOD s now buying 72 fewer aircraft down from 232 to 160 a reduction of 30 per cent the forecast development and production cost has risen by 20 per cent to 20 2 billion This is a 75 per cent increase in the unit cost of each aircraft The cost of supporting each aircraft has also risen by a third above that originally expected Key investment decisions were taken on an over optimistic basis and costs have risen at a rate the MOD did not predict The objectives of four partner nations on the project are not fully aligned and decision making is slow There have also been problems with spares and other support which mean the RAF is not flying Typhoon as much as planned      Air Force Magazine ,2001-07      The Political

 ,2001 Since the Cold War U S policymakers have debated the nature and extent of the contributions of the United States and its European allies to security and stability in Europe During the Cold War this debate centered on whether Europeans were spending enough on military forces and capabilities However the breakup of the Soviet Union resulted in the emergence of a broader set of instabilities and threats characterized by ethnic conflicts in the Balkans In this environment new questions have arisen about the extent of the military and nonmilitary contributions the United States and its European allies are making to security in the European region In response to the mandate contained in the Lloyd D Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 1 we identified and assessed 1 U S and European military and nonmilitary contributions to security and stability in the European region 2 U S and European military and nonmilitary contributions to security and stability in the Balkans and 3 the status of North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO and European defense initiatives to improve military capabilities for conflict management In addition this report summarizes the results of a companion GAO report concerning the effects of forward deployed U S forces in Europe on mobility requirements in the event of a regional conflict in Europe or the Middle East 2 To meet these objectives we analyzed a range of documents and interviewed numerous military and political officials from five European allies and the United States We define European allies as European NATO and European Union countries 4 and Switzerland

The Responsibility to Defend Bastian Giegerich, Maximilian Terhalle, 2021-06-08 The rise or resurgence of revisionist repressive and authoritarian powers threatens the Western US led international order upon which Germany's post war security and prosperity were founded With Washington increasingly focused on China's rise in Asia Europe must be able to defend itself against Russia and will depend upon German military capabilities to do so Years of neglect and structural underfunding however have hollowed out Germany's armed forces Much of the political leadership in Berlin has not yet adjusted to new realities or appreciated the urgency with which it needs to do so Bastian Giegerich and Maximilian Terhalle argue that Germany's current strategic culture is inadequate It informs a security policy that fails to meet contemporary strategic challenges thereby endangering Berlin's European allies the Western order and Germany itself They contend that Germany should embrace its historic responsibility to defend Western liberal values and the Western order that upholds them Rather than rejecting the use of military force Germany should wed its commitment to liberal values to an understanding of the role of power including military power in international affairs The authors show why Germany should seek to foster a strategic culture that would be compatible with those of other leading Western nations and allow Germans to perceive the world through a strategic lens In doing so they also outline possible elements of a new security policy     Heuristics and Biases Thomas Gilovich,Dale Griffin,Daniel Kahneman,2002-07-08 This book first published in 2002 compiles psychologists best attempts to answer important questions about intuitive judgment     Strategic Issues in European Aerospace Philip Lawrence,Derek Braddon,2017-07-05 A guide to the technical political and economic agenda for aerospace in the next decade and beyond It focuses on the consolidated American aerospace industry which has undergone 100 billion worth of merger activity and the task of rationalism and consolidation in the European industry     Parliamentary Debates (Hansard).
