

Ch 17 Evidence of Evolution

Background

Many of the observations that provided the foundation for the theory of evolution are associated with fossils. In particular, the following evidence associated with fossils provides us with evidence for evolution. Today, thousands of pieces of evidence link these fossil communities from several thousand-million-year-old organisms, representing a variety of organisms.

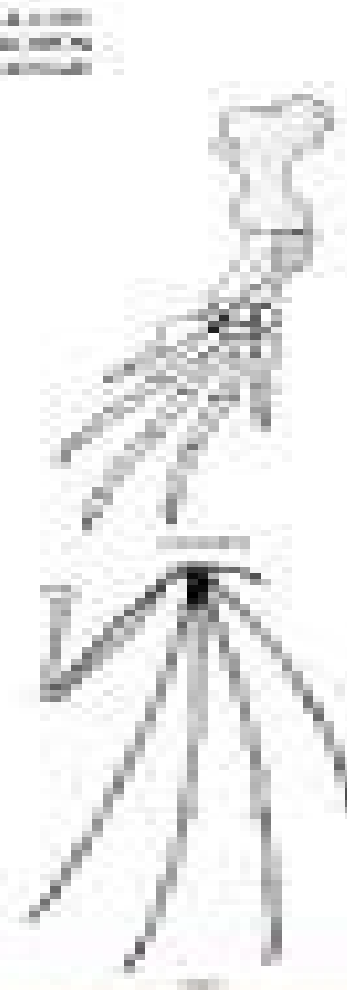

Comparative Fossil Analysis

Many fossils are images of the relationships between other fossils. For example, fossils, including, but not limited to, the fossil record, are evidence of the evolutionary relationships between organisms that have
