Adult Nutrition Education Materials, January 1982 -

October 1988 Holly Berry Irving, 1989 Measuring Diets and Food Choice in the Context of a Changing World Winnie Bell, Christine Blake, Shauna Downs, 2025-08-06 Historically, research in low and middle income countries has been focused on what people consume, with less attention to how and why people choose to consume the foods that they do. As incomes rise and local food environments undergo rapid changes, providing consumers with a wider array of options at competitive prices, understanding the underlying drivers of food choice, including the preferences and values that underpin them, has become increasingly important. In recent years, there have been renewed efforts to understand the drivers of food choice in the context of changing food environments and broader food systems, and how these drivers link with food consumption. The goal of this Research Topic is to look beyond dietary consumption, what people eat, by considering more holistically the various drivers of food choice, how and why people eat the foods they do, to better understand what underpins individual decisions. Ultimately, by understanding why people make the choices they do, especially when situated in the local food environment and/or broader food system, we can identify important entry points for behavior change interventions, develop a better understanding about the role of food safety in food choice decisions, improve the environment, climate, and food systems through improved knowledge on the drivers of food choice, and learn about how changing livelihoods shifts dynamics related to food choice amongst other important research tied to drivers of food choice.
