

Foreign Currency Transaction

Department/Division: General & Administrative

Code: G&A22

Total Pages: 2

OBJECTIVE

To ensure all foreign currency transactions are properly authorized and executed, protecting the organization from unnecessary exposure to exchange rate fluctuations.

STANDARD

Prohibition on Unauthorized Transactions

Employees are prohibited from authorizing or engaging in any foreign currency transaction that commits the company to future purchases or sales of foreign currencies, negotiable instruments, or any other transactions that result in exposure to future translation/exchange rate risks.

Requirement for Prior Approval

Any proposed foreign currency transaction that involves future exposure to exchange rates must receive prior written approval from authorized ownership. No employee may proceed without this approval.

Risk Assessment

Employees responsible for financial transactions must assess whether any transaction involves foreign currency risk. If such risk exists, they must submit a formal request for approval to the ownership group, detailing the nature of the transaction, the currencies involved, and potential risks.

Documentation for Approval

The formal request must include supporting documentation outlining the financial rationale, the current exchange rates, and projections of any possible exchange rate fluctuations.

Review Process

Once submitted, the Financial Controller or another designated authority must review the request for completeness and forward it to the ownership group for final approval.

Current Transactions

Current obligations or transactions that involve immediate payments or receipts in foreign currencies can proceed without prior approval, provided they are settled at the existing rate of exchange at the time of the transaction.

Verification of Exchange Rates
