Ballet - and Then? Maja Langsdorff, 2006 What becomes of ballet dancers when they finally leave the stage when their last curtain falls Maja Langsdorff journalist writer and a former ballet dancer interviewed 27 former dancers and recorded their life stories from their first ballet steps to their lives after dance At the time of their interviews they were between 21 and 62 years old their careers had ended from three months to 34 years ago Dancers give a lot if not everything in the performances They live their lives in the limelight In ballet profession and calling are united passion and suffering are often close to each other For most dancers their time is up at thirty thirty five They disappear from view One doesn't hear anything about them anymore as if they were swallowed up by the earth This book investigates their fates These short biographies show what formed them what moved them what influenced them And the portraits leave no doubt that dancers are special people even if they no longer dance

Ballet Shoes Noel Streatfeild, 2010-11-25 Pauline Petrova and Posy are found as orphaned babies in different parts of the world by eccentric fossil collector and explorer Gum He adopts them takes them to his London home and leaves them in the care of his niece Sylvia and the family Nurse Then off he goes to continue his exploring saying that he'll be back in five years time When the three little girls are old enough they choose the surname Fossil for themselves and vow to make the name famous At first they lead privileged and sheltered lives But when Gum fails to return after five years Sylvia's money begins to run out First she is forced to take in some boarders an engaging and eclectic mix of characters but then she decides that the girls should go to acting school This way they will be able to earn some money before they grow up Pauline adores the school as she dreams of becoming an actress Petrova hates it all she wants to do is learn about cars and planes and engines Posy loves it too she is born to be a dancer and the school is the perfect place for her
