

Binary Operation

Introduction

All of us have a crude idea regarding the meaning of the word 'operation.' We know, addition, subtraction, multiplication, division (except division by zero) on the set of real numbers, union, difference, intersection of two sets and composition of functions are mathematical operations. In fact, an operation is a mathematical method which when applied to two members (or, elements) of a set, gives rise to a unique element. This unique element may or may not belong to the set under consideration. Thus the operations of addition and multiplication on the set  $N$ , the set of natural numbers, give element  $(a, b) \in S \times S$  may not be the same as the image  $b * a \in S$  of element  $(b, a) \in S \times S$ .

- ③ In a binary operation  $*$ , the image  $a * b \in S$  of a ordered pair  $(a, b) \in S \times S$  may be equal to  $a$  or,  $b$ . Thus, under binary operation 'addition'  $(+)$  on  $Z$ , the image  $5 + 0$  is assigned to 5 and binary operation 'multiplication'  $(\times)$  on  $Z$ , the image  $5 \times 0$  is assigned to zero.
- ④ If  $S$  is a non-empty set, then a binary operation  $$  will be well-defined as a function when exactly one element is assigned to each possible ordered pair in  $S \times S$  and the element assigned to any ordered pair must belong to the set  $S$ . In such situation, the set  $S$  is said to be closed under binary operation  $$ . Therefore, we have the following
