Negotiating for Water Resources Andrea Haefner,2016-10-04 Over 90 per cent of the world population lives in countries that share a river basin with others Freshwater resources are scarce and different nations actors and users compete for limited resources in transboundary river basins often conflicting with each other Water is a resource with no substitute it cannot be secured in sufficiently large quantities through long distance trade deals and due to the interconnectivity of the hydrological system the actions of one country in its water management have a direct bearing on the interests of neighbouring countries For instance in the Mekong River Basin current hydropower and navigation developments in certain countries impact on traditional sources of income such as fisheries and rice production in others These kinds of changes in water use have given rise to conflict between countries in that region and others but have also led in some cases to greater cooperation The past few decades have seen a number of new agreements about the sharing of river resources and cooperation between riparian states Negotiating for Water Resources explores the drivers of conflict and cooperation between states in transnational river basins Drawing on extensive fieldwork and interviews on the Mekong Danube and La Plata River Basins the book provides a three level analysis across three case studies including the regional framework EU ASEAN and Mercosur the River Basin Organisations ICPDR MRC and CIC and the micro level The key question of the book is To what extent do power asymmetries prevent or inhibit cooperation between riparian states over water resources This is linked to the question of how institutions contribute to mitigate competition for natural resources and how states interact in a multilateral arena Overall the book argues that cooperation in transboundary river basins is possible even where there are asymmetric power relations challenging realist assumptions about competition and conflict over resources

Empowering the West Jay L. Brigham,1998 Westerners were at the forefront of the debate over electric power development even before the construction of large federally owned dams in the 1930s. At the heart of this debate was a conflict between public power advocates and the private utility industry over control of the environment, a struggle that was played out in the political arena. In this book, Jay Brigham describes that rivalry in the West in the years before the New Deal. Focusing on the conservative city of Los Angeles and its liberal counterpart Seattle, as well as on several small towns in the Midwest, Brigham shows how fierce battles broke out as private and public systems competed for customers and how, despite the differences between these two cities, public power ultimately triumphed in each.
