This volume examines the rapid rise and growth of modern literature in the three postcolonial nations of Zimbabwe Malawi and Zambia It tracks the multiple political and economic pressures that have shaped Central African writing since the end of World War II and reveals its authors heroic efforts to keep their literary traditions alive in the face of extreme poverty and AIDS Adrian Roscoe begins with a list of key political events Since writers were composing within both colonial and postcolonial contexts he pays particular attention to the nature of British colonialism especially theories regarding its provenance and motivation Roscoe discusses such historical figures as David Livingstone Cecil Rhodes and Sir Harry Johnston as well as modern power players including Robert Mugabe Kenneth Kaunda and Kamuzu Banda He also addresses efforts to create a literary historical record from an African perspective an account that challenges white historiographies in which the colonized was neither agent nor informer A comprehensive alphabetical guide profiles both established and emerging authors and further illustrates issues raised in the introduction Roscoe then concludes with a detailed bibliography recommending additional reading and sources At the close of World War II the people of Central Africa found themselves mired in imperial fatigue and broken promises of freedom This fueled a desire for liberation and a major surge in literary production and in this illuminating guide Roscoe details the campaigns for social justice and political integrity for education and economic empowerment and for gender equity participatory democracy rural development and environmental care that characterized this exciting period of development

Reanimating Regions James Riding, Martin Jones, 2017-05-12 Writing regions undertaking a regional study was once a standard form of geographic communication and critique This was until the quantitative revolution in the middle of the previous century and more definitively the critical turn in human geography towards the end of the twentieth century From then on writing regions as they were experienced phenomenologically or arguing culturally historically and politically with regions was deemed to be old fashioned Yet the region is and always will be a central geographical concept and thinking about regions can tell us a lot about the history of the discipline called geography Despite taking up an identifiable place within the geographical imagination in scholarship and beyond region remains a relatively forgotten under used and in part under theorised term Reanimating Regions marks the continued reinvigoration of a set of disciplinary debates surrounding regions the regional and regional geography Across 18 chapters from international interdisciplinary scholars this book writes and performs region as a temporary permanence something held stable not fixed and absolute at different points in time for different purposes There is as this expansive volume outlines no single reading of a region Reanimating Regions collectively rebalances the region within geography and geographical thought In renewing the geography of regions as not only a site of investigation but also as an analytical framework through which to write the world what emerges is a powerful reworking of the geographic imagination Read against one another the chapters weave together timely commentaries on region and regions across the globe with a particular emphasis upon the regional as played out in the United Kingdom and regional worlds both within and beyond Europe offering chapters from Africa and South America Addressing both the political and the cultural this volume responds to the need for a consolidated and considered reflection on region the regional and regional

From Enslavement to Environmentalism David McDermott Hughes,2011-10-01 From Enslavement to Environmentalism takes a challenging ethnographic and historical look at the politics of eco development in the Zimbabwe Mozambique border zone David Hughes argues that European colonization in southern Africa essentially an unsuccessful effort to turn the region into another North America or Australia has profoundly reshaped rural politics and culture and continues to do so as neoliberal developers commoditize the lands of African peasants in the name of conservation and economic progress Hughes builds his engaging analysis around a sort of natural experiment in the past whites colonized British Zimbabwe but avoided Portuguese Mozambique almost entirely In Zimbabwe chiefdoms that had historically focused on controlling people began to follow the English example of consolidating political power by dividing and controlling land Meanwhile in Mozambique Portugal perpetuated traditional practices of recruiting and distributing forced labor as the primary means of securing power The territory remained unmapped For almost the entire twentieth century a sharp disjuncture in the politics of land leadership labor and resource use marked the border zone In the late 1990s as white South Africans began to establish timber plantations in Mozambique that difference began to be effaced Under the banner of environmentalism and economic progress tourism firms were allowed to claim peasant farmland The objectives of liberal conservationists and developers though high minded led them to commoditize ancestral lands Southern African policymakers supported this new form of colonization as a form of racial integration between white investors and black peasants paving the way for an ironic and contentious situation in which ethnic tolerance gentrification and land grabbing have gone hand in hand From Enslavement to Environmentalism engages topics central to current debates in anthropology resource politics and development policy and will be of interest to both regional specialists and generalists
