Abstract: Staphylococcus aureus is a Gram-positive bacterium that is a common cause of skin and soft tissue infections. It is also a leading cause of hospital-acquired infections. The bacterium is characterized by its ability to form a thick, multi-layered biofilm on various surfaces, which protects it from the immune system and antibiotics. This biofilm is composed of a matrix of extracellular polymeric substances (EPS) and is anchored to the surface by a layer of surface-associated proteins. The biofilm is a highly organized community of bacteria that can persist for months or even years. The biofilm is a major barrier to the effectiveness of antibiotics and is a significant challenge in the treatment of infections. The biofilm is a complex structure that is difficult to penetrate and is a major cause of treatment failure.
