McDermott, Peter Burke, 2015-10-01 This volume provides the first comparative survey of the relations between the two most active book worlds in Eurasia between 1450 and 1850 Prominent scholars in book history explore different approaches to publishing printing and book culture They discuss the extent of technology transfer and book distribution between the two regions and show how much book historians of East Asia and Europe can learn from one another by raising new questions exploring remarkable similarities and differences in these regions production distribution and consumption of books The chapters in turn show different ways of writing transnational comparative history Whereas recent problems confronting research on European books can instruct researchers on East Asian book production so can the privileged role of noncommercial publications in the East Asian textual record highlight for historians of the European book the singular contribution of commercial printing and market demands to the making of the European printed record Likewise although production growth was accompanied in both regions by a wider distribution of books woodblock technology s simplicity and mobility allowed for a shift in China of its production and distribution sites farther down the hierarchy of urban sites than was common in Europe And the different demands and consumption practices within these two regions expanding markets led to different genre preferences and uses as well as to the growth of distinctive female readerships A substantial introduction pulls the work together and the volume ends with an essay that considers how these historical developments shape the present book worlds of Eurasia This splendid volume offers expert new insight into the ways of producing financing distributing and reading printed books in early modern Europe and East Asia This is comparative history at its best which leaves us with a better understanding of each context and of the challenges common to book cultures across space and time Ann Blair author of Too Much to Know Managing Scholarly Information before the Modern Age and professor of history Harvard University This engrossing account of the history of the book by leading specialists on the European and East Asian publishing worlds takes stock of what we know and how much we still need to know about the places that books had in the lives of our early modern forebears Each chapter is masterful state of the field coverage of its subject and together they set a new standard for future studies of the book East and West Timothy Brook author of The Troubled Empire China in the Yuan and Ming Dynasties Historical Dictionaries and Historical Dictionary Research Julie Coleman, Anne McDermott, 2012-10-24 This volume is a collection of papers from the 1st International Conference on Historical Lexicography and Lexicology at the University of Leicester in 2002 The purpose of the conference was to bring together scholars and academics from around the world working as scholars and editors on historical dictionaries or as practising lexicographers The papers are accordingly arranged in two sections reflecting the distinction between those individuals working on the historical development of dictionaries and those considering the lexicological problems and challenges facing the lexicographer in attempting to represent as fully and justly as possible historical forms of the English language

Ashgate Critical Essays on Early English Lexicographers Anne C. McDermott, 2017-03-02 The eighteenth century is renowned for the publication of Samuel Johnson s A Dictionary of the English Language which reference sources still call the first English dictionary This collection demonstrates the inaccuracy of that claim but its tenacity in the public mind testifies to how decisively Johnson formed our sense of what a dictionary is The essays and articles in this volume examine the already flourishing tradition of English lexicography from which Johnson drew as represented by Kersey Bailey and Martin as well as the flourishing contemporary trade in encyclopedic technical pronunciation and bilingual lexicons been a proliferation of exciting new work across many areas of children's literature and culture. Mapping this vibrant scholarship, the Second Edition of Keywords for Children's Literature presents original essays on essential terms and concepts in the field. Covering ideas from Aesthetics to Voice, an impressive multidisciplinary cast of scholars explores and expands on the vocabulary central to the study of children's literature. The second edition of this Keywords volume goes beyond disciplinary and national boundaries. Across fifty-nine print essays and nineteen online essays, it includes contributors from twelve countries and an international advisory board from over a dozen more. The fully revised and updated selection of critical writing, more than half of the essays are new to this edition, reflects an intentionally multinational perspective, taking into account non-English traditions and what childhood looks like in an age of globalization. All authors trace their keyword's uses and meanings from translation to poetry, taboo to diversity and trauma to nostalgia. The book's scope, clarity, and interdisciplinary play between concepts make this new edition of Keywords for Children's Literature essential reading for scholars and students alike.
